invite you to the launch of

David HM Wright's poetry collection Splendour of the Shore

First, and most obviously, Mr Wright has a marvellous command of language which he uses to great effect. The poems “sing”. Secondly, he creates powerful images: we can almost see and smell the scenes he describes. And thirdly, there is, underlying the lyrical description of scenes and events, a spiritual, almost metaphysical quality which makes the reader turn again to each poem to think about its meaning.

Philip Grundy

David Wright was born in Zimbabwe where he came to be recognised as one of Central Africa's White poets. He emigrated to Australia in 1982. He served as headmaster of Oxley College, Bowral, from 1982-1993 and of the International Grammar School, Sydney from 1994-2000. He is a graduate of the universities of Natal, Oxford, Rhodesia and Sydney. He is now retired and lives and writes in Kingston Beach, Tasmania.
