

Rob Blakers – Rock, ice, rainforest

This photographic exhibition presents moments from wild landscapes in Tasmania. It comes from fine winter light on ice and mountains, elegant sand-dunes and sand-stone, and ephemeral mist in quiet forest. It is the amazing Tasmanian endemic gondwanan flora and lingering twilight over the western sea. It is a collection of encounters, mostly recent, from three decades of pursuit.

Olivia Hickey – Topophillia

I am an explorer of the outdoors with a deep and long held connection to the wild places. I am drawn to hidden detail and find myself captivated by the complexity and beauty in the small. I collect natural treasures mindfully, transmute them into silver and return them to place. This process ensures that they are still part of the land and highlights the magic of the hidden details. I strive to capture the intangible moments and create talismans that connect people to the ephemeral elements of place so they can be worn on the landscape of the body.

Opening 6pm, Friday 5 February – Exhibition continues until Tuesday 1 March
